It was reported that Kathleen "swatted" a child while changing their diaper because they were biting her.

SW Bailey met with Kathleen at her child development home on 5/23/25. Kathleen stated that at the time of the incident, the children were doing "free play" and she was trying to make an email account for her husband. Kathleen said that some of the children started saying "poop" and she noticed that a child was having a "blow out" from their diaper. Kathleen said that when she was trying to change the child's diaper, the child was trying to bite her, and feces was getting all over. Kathleen said that she "swatted" the child to get their attention and calm them down. Kathleen said that her husband, who is her assistant, was not home to assist her. Kathleen said that she self-reported to the parent when they picked up the child and later called the parent because she was worried the child might have a bruise on their arm from her trying to hold them during the incident.

Kathleen acknowledged that her actions were not appropriate, but she admits that she was frustrated and was just trying to get the child cleaned up and changed without getting bit. Kathleen said that she is looking in to taking Positive Behavior Intervention Supports to come up with alternatives and better ways to handle situations like this. Kathleen said that the child is no longer attending her daycare.
